

TECHNOLOGY AND DATA PRIVACY

There's nothing in this world that runs without technology, you get everything with a click of a button and the information is presented to you. With information comes security, and thus it becomes very critical to protect and secure your personal data and information, making it important to be in compliance with the GDPR and Data Protection Laws.

Regulatory mechanism for Data Protection and privacy in India is the Information Technology Act, 2000 that deals with the issues relating to payment of compensation when there is misuse or wrongful disclosure of personal data.

The law office provides with the advisory and protection from violation and misuse of personal data, ensuring clients with best services and securing their important information.